The Mechanics' Lien Case.

In the criminal courts yesterday Jeremiah Costello, who was charged with forgery, was acquitted by the jury. It was claimed that the derendant had forged and uttered a bond which was used to release a certain mechanics' lien on his property. The case had occupied the attention of the court for the last three or four days, and Judge Wylie took occasion to remark, in his charge to the jury, that the foundation of the case was of the shallowest character. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty within a few minutes of leaving their seats. the defendant had forged and uttered a bond

"My wife has found St. Jacobs Oil of exceeding great benefit in rheumatism, with which she suffered much until she used this remedy," says ex-Lieutenant Governor Nor-man J. Coleman, of the St. Louis (Mo.) Rural World, in a recent communication.

Ottman Out of Court.

District Attorney Corkhill submitted to Judge Wylie in the criminal court yesterday a letter from the attorney general, directing him to dismiss all civil and criminal cases against William H. Ottman in the district. These cases arose out of the robbery at the treasury in 1875. There were five indictments against Ottman, three for larceny and the other two for receiving the stolen money. The amount alleged to have been stolen was $47,097.50. Judge Wylie directed the cases to be nolle pressed as requested by the attorney general.
